DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 112

The following is a quotation of the second paragraph of 35 U.S.C. 112:

The specification shall conclude with one or more claims particularly pointing out and distinctly claiming the subject matter which the applicant regards as his invention.

Claims 1-3 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 112, second paragraph, as being indefinite for failing to particularly point out and distinctly claim the subject matter which applicant regards as the invention. The inventive concept of the invention appears to depend specifically on the geometric arrangement of the transistor cell or transistor pair being claimed. With that in mind, the specific structure of the inventive cell is not clearly defined.

In addition, each claim recites that "first" drain or collector regions are formed at "the respective edge" of the cell. However, the geometries of these cells are not defined. That is, is the invention limited to only two drain regions formed at only two edges of an elongated cell, or are drain regions formed along the entire perimeter (four sides) of a rectangular cell? If it is the latter, is there only a single "second" drain region formed in the center of a rectangular cell? How many source or emitter regions are formed in each cell? Is this number limited to only two source/emitter regions per cell?

In other words, is each cell defined precisely by the configuration and number of regions shown in Fig. 2 of the instant application? That is, does each cell form drain/collector regions on only two edges, with only two first drain/collector regions

(D11) and (D12), only four source/emitter regions (S11), (S21), (S22) and (S12), and only four gate/base regions (G11), (G21), (G22), and (G12)?

Since claim 2 only defines a single cell, the phrase "of all cells" used in the second half of the claim lacks a proper antecedent basis. And, the reference in claims 1 and 3 to a "differential transistor pair" is unclear as to the exact number of transistors actually described.
